

Dear Parents,

September 2022

Today I am sending home several book order forms. I think that Scholastic does a good job of offering a wide selection of fun, quality books at great prices. If you would like to build or expand your child's library, this is a great way to do it. I also need to say that occasionally there are books that may not be appropriate for your child. I do not necessarily endorse every product that Scholastic offers. Please use your own judgment when looking through the order forms.

Ordering from these book orders is completely optional, of course. If you see some books you would like to purchase, you have the option of ordering online. When you order, the class receives points that can be used towards new books and other resources for the classroom. To order online, go to www.scholastic.com/bookclubs. The code for me/our class is GYMML. When you go online to order, you will find the same flyers/order forms as the ones I have sent home today. Also available are the other grade level flyers/order forms (younger and older). Finally, Scholastic has one whole section of available online only books if you would like to browse online. If you choose to order, you may use the online method, or you may send the paper order form with your money to school. If you send the order forms to school and write a check, please make the check out to Scholastic Book Clubs. If you order online, you will notice that the listed prices are a bit lower than the flyer prices. That is because tax will be added when you order online.

With online orders, students may choose a free book with any order that is at least $25. Use the code READS to unlock that offer.

**There is a link to the Book Club on my web page on the school's website.

These book orders are due by next Thursday, September 29. If you have any questions, please let me know.

Have a blessed week!
